THE ETOWAH RIVER – A RIVER EXQUISITE. Rarely within the continental United States will you find a private holding of land that contains close to a mile of wild river flowing through. But here in the North Georgia Mountains and just outside the scenic town of Dahlonega - Southern Living Magazine's "Best Small Town in Georgia" - you'll find exactly that. Here on a 124 acre tract, the waters flow through unbridled, winding across the property and moving from deep, quiet pools to sparkling rapids punctuated with massive boulders of granite. Privacy is assured with neither sight nor sound of another human. A long, gentle walking path parallels the river for much of the property and across the ridgeline crest extends gentle rounded terrain. Access is via groomed gravel roadways that bring you in all the way to the water.
