OF STATURE EXTRAORDINARY - Hewn of sunlight, stone, timber and waterfalls; eminent in standing among all the properties of the Southern Appalachians. Nearly four years of patient, hand-crafted construction and quality are evident in the Falling Water home - every tight seam, straight line, stone laid; every substantive component - all reflective of a pride in craftsmanship and a discriminating selection of materials. The natural woods inside and out - all exposed woodwork on every surface - were harvested from the owner's properties and hand-milled here on site. Next to the main residence is the "Bird's Nest" cottage, further down a toy garage and guest cottage and electrical house for generator. Out at the grassland is a 5,000 sf carriage house, a woodshed, covered shed and gate house, all with exteriors of the native lumbers that were milled on site. The property, structures and residence would lend itself to a multiplicity of uses and can accommodate one person or dozens.
